Background

The International Republican Institute (IRI) is a nonprofit, nonpartisan, organization dedicated to advancing freedom and democracy worldwide. Since 1983, IRI has worked to develop democratic institutions and ideals, carrying out a variety of international programs to promote freedom, self-government and the rule of law worldwide. IRI provides technical assistance in the areas of political party strengthening, developing civic institutions and open elections, promoting democratic governance and advancing the rule of law.

IRI has extensive experience in working directly with political decision makers in sub-Saharan Africa. Through multiple interventions working with political actors – such as developing political party codes of conduct, establishing peace accords, and scenario planning – IRI has engaged in preventing and mitigating election-related violence. For example, in Nigeria, IRI facilitated the signing of a peace accord between the two major candidates, which included commitments to non-violence and an enforcement mechanism run by a group of respected elders. As part of an election consortium in the Central African Republic, IRI assisted political parties and actors and the media to develop codes of conduct and supported local peace committees in 12 of the country’s 16 prefectures. Relying on the codes of conducts as one of the tools, peace committees mitigated, deescalated, or resolved election-related violence during the campaign period and at polling stations on Election Day. For the 2018 elections in Zimbabwe, IRI, in a partnership with Creative Associates, has assessed and profiled the motives, grievances, risks, and mitigating factors associated with the potential for violence involving political parties in the 2018 electoral cycle; and IRI is establishing mechanisms to de-conflict these relationships to foster a peaceful electoral process. While these interventions have all played or have a potential to play a significant role in deterring electoral violence, their implementation has often been piecemeal, rather than be part of a comprehensive approach that is informed by realities on the ground. Thus, IRI wishes to develop a diagnostic tool that will help inform how what specific interventions would be best suited to a particular the context as part of a broader, more comprehensive approach to address electoral violence in a particular country. This diagnosis tool would focus on determining the underlying factors that may incentivize political actors to either promote or prevent violence and provide recommendations for targeted, strategic interventions. Included in this tool will be rapid evidence reviews of existing literature on efforts to mitigate electoral violence, grouped by IRI as Theories of Change (ToCs).

Evaluation and Award Process

1. IRI may contact any Bidder for clarification or additional information, but Bidders are advised that IRI intends to evaluate the offers based on the written proposals, without discussions, and reserves the right to make decisions based solely on the information provided with the initial proposals. IRI may but is not obligated to conduct additional negotiations with the most highly rated Bidders prior to award of a contract, and may at its sole discretion elect to issue contracts to one or more Bidders.

2. Mathematical errors will be corrected in the following manner: If a discrepancy exists between the total price proposed and the total price resulting from multiplying the unit price by the corresponding amounts, then the unit price will prevail and the total price will be corrected. If there is a discrepancy between the numbers written out in words and the amounts in numbers, then the amount expressed in words will prevail. If the Bidder does not accept the correction, the offer will be rejected.
3. IRI may determine that a proposal is unacceptable if the prices proposed are materially unbalanced between line items or sub-line items. Unbalanced pricing exists when, despite an acceptable total evaluated price, the price of one or more contract line items is significantly overstated or understated as indicated by the application of cost or price analysis techniques. A proposal may be rejected if IRI determines that the lack of balance poses an unacceptable risk.
4. IRI will conduct a source selection based as follows:

IRI intends to make an award to the responsible Bidder based on the following evaluation factors:

- a) Past Performance: The applicant's stability, experience and record of past performance – 30 percent
- b) Organizational Capacity: An assessment of the organizational capacity to complete the product/service set out in the application – 40 percent
- c) Cost efficiency: Cost, flexibility and transparency of applicant's financial application – 30 percent

IRI intends to evaluate Bidders' proposals in accordance with these factors and make an award to the responsible Bidder whose proposal is most advantageous to the program.

5. If a cost realism analysis is performed, cost realism may be considered in evaluating performance or price.
