Background
The International Republican Institute (IRI) is a nonprofit, nonpartisan, organization dedicated to advancing freedom and democracy worldwide. Since 1983, IRI has worked to develop democratic institutions and ideals, carrying out a variety of international programs to promote freedom, self-government and the rule of law worldwide. IRI provides technical assistance in the areas of political party strengthening, developing civic institutions and open elections, promoting democratic governance and advancing the rule of law.

To strengthen the capacity of local Colombian governance actors to respond to the challenges migration pose to democratic resilience, IRI will support local efforts that promote social cohesion – specifically trust and collaboration – among Venezuelan and Colombian communities. IRI will be working with local partners to conduct inter-group dialogues and community projects to reduce the strain on democratic institutions caused by marginalization and social hostility. IRI will assess the effects of these initiatives through social network and survey analyses, the results of which will enable the Institute to provide local governance actors with useful information to improve governance outcomes and scale similar interventions.

To this end, IRI is seeking an academic/research consultant to advise on the design and provide analysis of two evaluative research activities: 1) A social network analysis with program participants and their networks to assess the diffusion effects of the program activities, and 2) A baseline and an endline survey to gauge perceptions of participants and a control group on key issues of interest.

Period of Performance
12 months with the option to extend.

Note: This RFP (CENTER2023ELP09o) covers only research consulting services. A similar RFP including both research consulting as well as field data collection has been posted on IRI’s website under CENTER2023ELP10o. Those interested in offering research consulting services, as well as data collection services, should reference the CENTER2023ELP10o RFP.
Statement of Work

IRI is seeking an academic/research consultant to propose a research design for two activities: 1) a social network analysis and 2) a baseline and endline survey for an IRI project on intergroup dialogues and community engagement projects in Colombia to improve social cohesion among Venezuelan migrants and Colombian citizens. These dialogues and projects may take place in one or two of these three areas: Jamundi, Soacha, and Villavicencio. The contractor will be required to develop the data collection tools to be used in both research activities, provide on-the-go mentorship services regarding research design, planning, and data collection and quality control for IRI local contractors who will gather the data in-country. The contractor will analyze the raw data collected to produce draft and final reports for both activities. To this end, the Contractor will be expected to attend meetings with IRI, its sub-awardees, and the local contractor(s), on a as needed basis.

Further details of the two research activities are as follows:

- The social network analysis (SNA) should take place with 240 program participants and their networks (estimated to be somewhere between 480 and 36,000) to assess the diffusion effects of the program activities. The social network analysis proposed could be quantitative or qualitative or hybrid. The mapping portion of this analysis should take place within approximately three months of the start of this contract. For this activity, the Contractor should use this guiding question to propose a design: Do the benefits of IRI programming (positive shift in attitudes and behaviors) diffuse to the social network of program participants?

- The baseline and endline in-person survey should gauge perceptions of two groups of people on key issues of interest: social cohesion, inter-group prosocial behaviors, and willingness to collaborate on challenges. These groups include IRI's program participants (Group A) and eligible non-participants (Group B), whose demographic profiles resemble individuals in Group A. The total number of people from Group A who would be surveyed would not exceed 240 individuals. Group B will also have the same number of individuals as Group A. The data gathered through these surveys would be analyzed using a difference-in-difference method to assess the impact of the project activities on the participants. For this activity, the Contractor should use these guiding questions to propose the design: 1) To what extent does IRI’s programming strengthen inter-group trust and a sense of belonging among host and migrant participants? 2) In what ways does IRI’s programming influence host and migrant participants to modify their behavior toward the other community?

Furthermore, for each of the research activities, the Contractor should propose the research design based on the following parameters and questions:

Social Network Analysis (Quantitative/Qualitative/Hybrid)

- Social Network data: specification of population, sample, network modes
Who will be included in the sampling frame? How will their network be identified and validated?

Types of modes: will this mapping be based on single/two-mode/multi-mode?

Measurement and data collection strategy: what kind of data will be gathered? How often? Will this entail in-person interviews? What kind of secondary data will be used, if any?

Social network analysis strategy: how will the data be analyzed?

Baseline and Endline

Sampling design: who will be included in the sample and why? Will this be single or multi-tiered sampling?

Fieldwork plan: who will be recruited as interviewers? How will the ‘Group B’ be identified and recruited for surveys? How long will the fieldwork take? What data quality control measures will be employed?

Deliverables

- Data Collection Tool for Social Network Analysis (SNA), including questionnaires to be used
- Data Collection Tool for the Baseline and Endline Survey, including the instrument outlining behavioral and attitudinal outcomes and sampling design.
- One Draft SNA Data Analysis Report that summarizes the methodology, sampling, scope, limitations, main findings, and implications.
- One Draft Baseline Data Analysis Report that summarizes the methodology, sampling, scope, limitations, and main findings.
- One Draft Endline Data Analysis Report, that summarizes the methodology, sampling, scope, limitations, main findings (including comparison between the baseline and endline results), and implications.
- One Short Final Report, aggregating results of the data analysis of the survey and SNA, focusing on answering the specific research questions pertaining to program effects and evidence of diffusion.

- Experience with qualitative methodologies
- Experience with social network analysis

Evaluation and Award Process

1. IRI may contact any Bidder for clarification or additional information, but Bidders are advised that IRI intends to evaluate the offers based on the written proposals, without discussions, and reserves the right to make decisions based solely on the information provided with the initial proposals. IRI may but is not obligated to conduct additional negotiations with the most highly rated Bidders prior to award of a contract, and may at its sole discretion elect to issue contracts to one or more Bidders.

2. Mathematical errors will be corrected in the following manner: If a discrepancy exists between the total price proposed and the total price resulting from multiplying the unit price by the corresponding amounts, then the unit price will prevail and the total price will be corrected. If there is a discrepancy between the numbers written out in words and the amounts in numbers, then the amount expressed in words will prevail. If the Bidder does not accept the correction, the offer will be rejected.

3. IRI may determine that a proposal is unacceptable if the prices proposed are materially unbalanced between line items or sub-line items. Unbalanced pricing exists when, despite an acceptable total evaluated price, the price of one or more contract line items is significantly overstated or understated as indicated by the application of cost or price analysis techniques. A proposal may be rejected if IRI determines that the lack of balance poses an unacceptable risk.

4. IRI will conduct a source selection based as follows:

IRI intends to make an award to the responsible Bidder based on the following evaluation factors: Total scores of 100

a) Technical evaluation, (including technical capabilities, proposed technical approach, and personnel qualifications) – 55 percent:
   – Experience with quantitative methodologies including leading statistical matching and difference-in-differences analysis: 20%
   – Experience with social network analysis: 20%
   – Professional proficiency in Spanish: 15%

b) Past performance and experience in performing similar projects – 25 percent
   – Experience performing similar research in developing countries: 15%
   – Experience leading or supporting a program evaluation: 10%
IRI intends to evaluate Bidders’ proposals in accordance with these factors and make an award to the responsible Bidder whose proposal is most advantageous to the program.

5. If a cost realism analysis is performed, cost realism may be considered in evaluating performance or price.
